"Dear Customer,

Sorry for the trouble caused.

We sent the package according to the address you fill in when you place the order. Maybe it is the logistics company made a mistake. Since the shipping information shows that the package has been delivered, so the logistics provider will not give us a claim, but we paid for the product cost and shipping fee. We also suffered a big loss in this transaction. In this case, we recommend giving you a 20% refund as compensation. Do you accept?

Looking forward to your reply!

Best wishes,

Good Morning,

1- I did not receive the package & no one called me in the phone number registered in the order.

2- I requested you to tell me about the local logistics company but you did not.

3- I requested you to give me evidence about to whom the package was delivered but you did not.

4- These are your mistakes & I am the customer, so you have to deliver the order to me or refund the whole money.

Otherwise, I will post a general warning about your company & send a complaint to your ministry of trading and all concerned bodies.

Best wishes

Looking forward to your reply!

Good Afternoon,

It is not logical to pay you 70 % for your mistake. I paid for a product either to deliver the product to me or to refund full money. It is not my mistake.

"Dear Customers,

Sorry for all the trouble again.

I feel very sad. As a customer service, I have tried my best to strive for the best solution for you. Sorry still can't satisfy you. I have checked with the manager again. The 40% refund is the highest compensation amount. Hope you can reconsider the proposal!

Best wishes,"

Good afternoon,

The big question; why shall I pay for your mistakes?

I'll not accept less than the total money I paid.

As you don't know the local courier company and you have no evidence that anyone received the package.
